More Arrests Expected During To-Day or This Evening.

Fire Marshal Mitchell, with Assistant Marshal Freel, is hot on the trace of the gang of incendiaries which have for nths past been terrorizing east side ket Police Court at 9 o'clock in carnes and secret consultation with Justice Hogan. When they left it was hinted that day was over.

The consultation with Justice Hogan

Blumenthal was caught in the very act of setting fire to the five-story tenement 28 East Broadway late Saturday might. The tenement is occupied by twenty families, and had not the incendiary been detected the loss of life would undoubtedly have been terrible. All the tenants were asleep when Iflumenthal made his way into the ceilar of the building and taking off his hat, coat and vest, went systematically to work to burn up everything. Dragging out several bundles of wood he ranged them up against a bin which was full of inflammable material and then epinkied the pile with kerosene and henzine. He harranged another pile in the same manner and prepared to lightle in. Hyman Kaiser, who lives in the building, was attending a party Saturday night and was ate in getting home. On entering the house he detected the smell of the kerosene, and becoming suspicious, awakened the janitor, Michael Shorotsky. Both began a search and with a lighted candle made their way to the cellar.

Blumenthal sprang at them the moment they entered, and at the first assault the janitor fled. Kaiser, who is not more than eighteen years old, fought with Blumenthal all over the place, but he was fast getting the worst of it when the janitor, who had regained his courage and had aroused some of the other tenants, ran down to his assistance.

Even then they could not sublue the man until Detective Powers, of the Madison street police station, who had been attracted by the noise, joined the crowd. Blumenthal was then subdued and was finally taken to the Madison street police station before being discovered he had made one attempt to light the pile, but it had gone out.

When brought to the station be speke about having accomplices, but afterwards wanted to deny having said so. It is not the pile of the pile of

They tried one path after another. It was of no use. They seemed to travel in a circle, and to arrive every now and then at the starting point.

At last, fearing that they might have to remain in the Park until dawn or a policeman came to their rescue, they rushed wildly along a rath which led to a bluff. In the darkness they did not realize this until Miss Dresser missed her footing and fell, rolling down over the rocks.

Endel clambored down to his companion, and then shouted for help until Patrolman Rockwell arrived. He summoned an ambulance, and the surgeon who came found that Miss Dresser's thigh was fractured and removed her to the hospital.
